

Est. 1926

Aussie Grown

We proudly support Australian farming and processing, being one of the last frozen vegetable manufacturers in Australia. Many of our local farmers have been working with Edgell long term – some are even third generation Edgell growers. In Tasmania alone we work with 150 farmers who grow vegetables on 4,500ha of prime land. We support our farmers through times of drought and floods. We work with them to improve crop varieties, soil quality and harvesting methods in the most sustainable way we know, because we believe it is important to keep as much as possible of our food source here in Australia. This is not only important to control quality but also helps to reduce food miles and supports our great farming community.

We make every effort to source local produce, but in times of adverse weather conditions or with products that aren't grown in sufficient commercial quantities in Australia, such as Sugar Snap Peas and Baby Corn, we sometimes need to import. In those rare cases, we do not spot buy, but ensure trusted quality by approving every supplier's site before they even produce anything for us, as well as testing the product when it arrives.

Our harvesting period starts in December with peas in Tasmania and corn up in Northern NSW and ends in September with carrots. Our vegetables are frozen within 24 hours of harvesting – most within 6 hours – to help retain nutritional value. We also steam blanch, not water blanch for optimum cooking yields, because we know you don't want to pay for water.

Please don't hesitate to contact me to discuss how Edgell can add value to your business.

Kind Regards,

Silke Galde

Marketing Manager
Edgell Vegetables

